

The Cloister

Care worth staying home for.

Lagos's Harley Street · a private medical members' address in Ikoyi

Prepared for Dr Itunu Akinware, Group CEO, Medbury Healthcare Group

A Consult for Africa concept · July 2026 · Private and confidential

01 / THE IDEA

Lagos's first Harley Street.

Harley Street has been the address London's private specialists take their consulting rooms for more than a century. The patient trusts the street before the doctor. The address does the selling, and the specialists pay to sit behind it. Lagos has no equivalent, and the top of its market pays for that gap by flying abroad.

This is a concept for the Lagos equivalent, in Ikoyi. We call it The Cloister: not a clinic and not a building to rent out, but a medical institution with two memberships under one prestige address. The specialists who practise there belong to it, and the families who trust it belong to it too. Medbury owns the institution. Consult for Africa builds and runs it, and brings the specialists.

Done right, this is not a cost Medbury carries for prestige. It is a medical institution that carries the Medbury name to the top of the Lagos market, is funded by recurring memberships on both sides, and pays for itself from the first year.

02 / THE OPPORTUNITY

The top of the market is flying abroad.

More than three quarters of Nigerian health spending is out of pocket, and the wealthiest slice of that spending leaves the country: the executives, the families and the diaspora who take their serious care to London, Dubai and India. They are not flying for the procedure. They are flying for the address, the trust, and the experience, and those are the things Lagos has never packaged.

The market is not empty, it is unfinished. Duchess sells executive health checks from NGN 83,000 to NGN 478,000 and a flagship three-day check at NGN 4M, positioned openly as an alternative to medical tourism. Reddington runs a premium screen of the same shape. What none of them has built is the address that keeps the relationship: a trusted place, a family physician who knows you, and the specialist on call the day you need one. The check-up is a transaction. The membership is a relationship, and the relationship is what sends people abroad.

The opportunity is to bring both home at once: the prestige address the specialists want, and the continuous membership the families want. That is the whole of this concept.

03 / THE MOATThe part no competitor can copy.*A supply of specialists we can call.

As President of the Doctors Foundation for Care, C4A can bring diaspora specialists to practise directly, through MANSAG, ANPA, CANPAD and the wider network. These are the names that make a premium address credible from the first week, and the hardest thing for any competitor to assemble. The founding specialists are people we already know.

The Medbury network underneath it.

Lifecheck diagnostics, the pharmacy arm, and a tertiary use-of-facilities partnership in Ikoyi, such as Lagoon, sit under the whole institution. The specialist consults at the address and operates at the tertiary partner, so the patient gets the full pathway and Medbury never has to build or own a hospital to deliver it.

A two-sided pull no single-sided business has.

The specialists come for the address and the patients already booked for them. The families come for the specialists and the family physician who coordinates them. Each side makes the other more valuable, and the diagnostics and pharmacy revenue from both flows back into the Medbury network. A competitor would have to assemble the address, the diaspora bench, the family practice and the network at once. We already hold all four.

04 / THE ARCHITECTURE

Two businesses under one address.

The institution runs as two businesses that feed each other. The address is a members' club for specialists. The family-practice membership is a concierge product for families, run as a dedicated Medbury operating company. The OpCo anchors the address as a tenant; the address gives the OpCo its specialist bench.

Two businesses	The address	The family-practice membership
Who belongs	Specialists	HNI individuals and families
What they pay	Membership, then per session	An annual membership
What they get	A prestige base, member rates, offices	A family physician, an annual check, specialists on call
Run by	C4A operates the address	A Medbury family-practice OpCo

Underneath both sits the Medbury network: Lifecheck diagnostics, the pharmacy, and the tertiary pathway. The address gives the membership its specialists; the membership gives the address its patients; Medbury owns both and captures the diagnostics, pharmacy and procedure revenue they generate.

05 / THE ADDRESS

Belong by membership. Pay per use.

The address is priced the way Harley Street is, proven for decades. A specialist does not rent a room by the month. They pay a membership to belong, which buys the Ikoyi address and nameplate, the fully staffed and serviced facility, and member rates, then pay per use by the session. Casual, non-member use is priced at roughly twice the member rate, so committing always wins. Membership is annual and paid upfront, a deliberate commitment rather than a casual room-hire, so the address carries only serious, practising specialists.

Specialist membership.

Specialist membership	Recurring	What it buys
Affiliate (fly-in / diaspora)	NGN 500,000 / yr	The address and a listed plate, member session rates, booking support when in town
Practising (resident)	NGN 1,000,000 / yr	The above, plus priority booking, the lowest rates, and referrals from the membership
Dedicated room (exclusive)	NGN 2,500,000 / mo	A whole consulting room held permanently; membership included

Room use, per 6-hour session.

Pay per use	Member	Guest / ad hoc
Consulting room	NGN 120,000	NGN 220,000
Procedure room	NGN 280,000	NGN 500,000

The address runs two six-hour sessions a day, roughly 8am to 8pm. A member's session at NGN 120,000, staff and power included, is a genuine bargain for a specialist billing premium fees. The two BQ offices are let whole, on a permanent lease, to organisations such as the Doctors Foundation for Care. Every rate is validated against the live Med Lyfe rooms before launch.

06 / THE MEMBERSHIP

A family physician, an annual check, and the specialists on call.

The patient side is a product in its own right, run through a dedicated Medbury operating company. It is concierge family medicine, the model HCA runs in London and MDVIP in the United States, priced to Lagos: a dedicated family physician holding a small panel, unlimited priority care, an embedded annual executive wellness screen, and specialist access the family physician coordinates and expedites at the address. It is sold as a membership, in three tiers.

Membership tier	Per year	What it includes
Individual	NGN 1,500,000 / yr	Family physician, priority care, annual screen, specialist access
Family (up to four)	NGN 3,500,000 / yr	The above for the family; screens for the two principals
Executive / Elite	NGN 6,000,000 / yr	A Royal-level annual screen, 24/7 access, home visits, fastest referral

The annual screen follows the local premium standard, the shape Reddington and Duchess already sell: full physical, broad labs, resting and stress ECG, chest imaging, ultrasound, mammography and cancer screening. It is the anchor benefit that justifies a recurring fee, and it drives diagnostics and pharmacy volume back into the Medbury network. A family physician carries a panel of about 350 members, so the practice scales on a handful of physicians. Full product design and the OpCo P&L are in a companion brief.

07 / THE EXPERIENCE

What it feels like.

The family.

A Lagos family belongs to The Cloister. Their family physician knows their history and takes their calls. The annual executive check happens on-site, unhurried, in a building that feels like the private clinics they used to fly to. When the father needs a cardiologist, the family physician walks him to one of the address's specialists that week, not onto a flight to London. When the daughter needs a procedure, it happens down the corridor or at the tertiary partner. The relationship, and the money, stay in Lagos.

The specialist.

A diaspora cardiologist flies in for a week each month. She holds her clinics at a prestige Ikoyi address, with patients already booked by the family physicians, a nurse and front-of-house she does not have to hire, and a theatre pathway at the tertiary partner. She pays a modest membership and a fair session rate, and keeps a real Lagos practice without building one. The names on the plates are the reason the families join, and the families are the reason the names come.

08 / THE FINANCIALS

Two recurring engines, one building.

The address earns from specialists, sessions and leases.

The address, at target run-rate	Monthly	Annual
Specialist membership (roster ~30)	NGN 1,666,667	NGN 20,000,000
Consulting sessions (5 rooms, ~55% sold)	NGN 15,600,000	NGN 187,200,000
Procedure sessions (2 rooms, ~35% sold)	NGN 9,000,000	NGN 108,000,000
BQ offices, permanent lease (2, e.g. DFC)	NGN 2,000,000	NGN 24,000,000
Family-practice OpCo (anchor tenant)	NGN 4,000,000	NGN 48,000,000
Gross revenue	NGN 32,266,667	NGN 387,200,000
Less: cost to hold the building	(NGN 7,666,667)	(NGN 92,000,000)
Address contribution before operator fee	NGN 24,600,000	NGN 295,200,000

The membership earns from families, at a Year-2 target.

The membership OpCo (Year 2)	Members	Annual revenue
Individual members	250	NGN 375,000,000
Family members	100	NGN 350,000,000
Executive / Elite members	30	NGN 180,000,000
Membership revenue	380	NGN 905,000,000

The upfront to open the address is NGN 100M (fit-out NGN 50M, one year's lease advance NGN 50M), recovered inside the first year. Together, at the Year-2 target, the two businesses run close to NGN 1.3 billion a year in gross revenue, most of it recurring, from a converted Ikoyi house, and both drive further diagnostics, pharmacy and procedure revenue into the Medbury network. Figures are conservative and validated against the live Med Lyfe rates before the lease is committed.

09 / ROLLOUT

How it opens, without ever holding an empty building.

Before the lease. C4A signs the founding specialists from the diaspora network, lines up anchor member families from the Medbury base, confirms the tertiary pathway, and lets Med Lyfe set the live rates. Signed members, not optimism, take on the building.

Months 1 to 3. Secure and fit out the Ikoyi house. Open the address with names already on the plates. Launch the family-practice membership to Medbury's existing HNI patients and corporate principals, with the annual screen as the opening hook.

Months 4 to 12. Fill the specialist roster and the membership, ramp the sessions, and run the annual-screen engine that feeds diagnostics. The address reaches its run-rate; the membership builds its panels.

Year 2 and beyond. Scale the membership, add a second address, and take the model to Abuja. The name is now the premium medical address in Lagos.

10 / STRUCTURE AND THE ASK

Who owns it, who runs it, and how we start.

Medbury owns and funds the institution: the address and the family-practice OpCo. C4A builds and operates both, brings the founding specialists through the Doctors Foundation for Care network, and holds the clinical pathway. C4A is paid an operator fee, illustratively a share of the contribution in Medbury's favour, set on signing. C4A's platforms and network are licensed to the venture, not contributed as equity, so the asset and its upside stay with Medbury.

Illustrative address economics	Amount
Address contribution (target run-rate)	NGN 295,200,000	per year
Operator fee to C4A (illustrative, ~40%)	NGN 118,080,000	per year
Net to Medbury from the address alone	NGN 177,120,000	per year

That is before the membership OpCo's own profit and before the diagnostics, pharmacy and procedure revenue both engines drive into Medbury. The risks are held the same way: we sign members on both sides before the lease, we validate every rate against Med Lyfe, and we negotiate a landlord contribution so the fit-out is part-funded.

What we need from you.

1. Confirm the concept and the direction of the tariff and the membership tiers.
2. C4A signs the founding specialists, opens the family-practice membership to your HNI base, and confirms the tertiary pathway.
3. On confirmed members, we shortlist Ikoyi buildings and bring back a costed lease-and-fit-out plan and the companion OpCo product brief for your decision.
